Grayling resident Tasha Carlisle recently spent a year in Ghana getting to know the culture and working with children. She discovered there is only one book for every five children in the country and is now asking Crawford County residents to help send the gift of literacy and the love of reading to those children. District deals with second bomb threat in a month

by Cheryll Ruley Staff Writer

For the second time in a month, Crawford AuSable School District administrators were faced with a bomb threat. The latest occurred at Grayling Middle School (GMS) on January 12.

School was dismissed at GMS on Monday at 11:15 a.m. following the discovery of a written, threat in a girls' restroom. The last threat was made at Grayling High School on December 18, 2003. A freshman girl confessed to and apologized for the incident, but was expelled.

Superintendent Milli Haug said a Michigan State Trooper from the Gaylord Post was brought in with a dog trained to sniff out or detect explosives and, after a thorough search of the building, nothing was found. The school was locked down for the night.

On Tuesday morning, January 13, teams of teachers searched the backpacks and coats of each student to assure nothing dangerous was being brought into the school. Students then gathered in the gym for an assembly led by Principal Jeff Branch.

Branch spoke to the students about the disruptiveness of making such a threat, from raising fears in their fellow students to keeping them from their studies.

He also reminded them the through the district and can't do school has only one and one-half snow days left before the district would have to add days at the end of the school year,

Haug said she spoke to the students about the seriousness of the crime of making a bomb threat. She explained that the law says the school board must permanently expel a student for such actions. Following an entire year, the student may then file an appeal for re-enrollment in the district.

The superintendent said she wanted to emphasize to the students that expulsion means they can not attend any school function, can't receive an education so much as attend a football game or skate on the district's

D.A.R.E. and School Liaison Officer Deputy Randy Herman reassured the students that the building is safe and explained what police action was taken after the threat was discovered. He also explained the lengthy juvenile court process for students who commit the felony. Also in attendance were Crawford County Sheriff Kirk Wakefield, Undersheriff Shawn Krayes, and School Liaison Officer Deputy Bill Bonkowski.

Second man charged with 2001 Piehl murder

by Cheryll Ruley Staff Writer

Following a long term investigation, a second local man is facing open murder charges in the 2001 death of Shane Piehl.

In May 2002, a jury found a Beaver Creek Township resident not guilty of the murder, that Crawford County Prosecutor John Huss called "a drug deal gone wrong."

In the 2002 trial, testimony was given by a number of witnesses, including Piehl's girlfriend, of how Piehl sold or traded a variety of his prescription painkillers on the street, including Oxycontin. He was being treated for pain of a back injury he sustained in a snowboarding accident.

Piehl was found shot twice in the head and lying next to his car on May 30, 2001 on a two-track north of Four Mile Road in Grayling Township.

Testimony at the 2002 trial revealed phone calls to and from Piehl on May 29, 2001 may have led to a drug deal that ended his life. Although he had just had a prescription filled, those pill bottles were found empty in his car.

An autopsy by medical examiners in Grand Rapids determined Piehl, then 21 years old, died May 29, the day before his body was discovered by family members.

Crawford County Sheriff Kirk Wakefield said a collaborative effort between his department and the Michigan State Police has secured what they believe is enough evidence to convict 42year old Michael Patrick Bergan, of Grayling, for the murder of

"I am relieved, just relieved," said Shane's mother, Kathy. "I have been so concerned for my husband and my daughter. They have really had a hard time with all of this. All we have ever asked for is justice."

Library Board to find new director

by Cheryll Ruley Staff Writer

'A motion to review the expiring contract of its director died without support at the January 8 meeting of the Crawford County Library Board.

Library Board President Ray Priebe, Jr. said the motion was offered to the board by Personnel Chair Judy Morford. A supportive motion by remaining board members Loretta Hassan, Barbara Greene and Carol Raybuck was not offered.

Morford resigned from the board following the meeting and wrote a letter to the Library Board and the Crawford County Board of Commissioners thanking them for the opportunity to serve the county as a member of the Library Board.

The contract between the Library Board and Edward Elsner is complete as of January 13 and a search for a new director has begun. Priebe said a transitional team will use many resources to find the right candidate with the necessary credentials to direct library services for Crawford County residents, Elsner said the lack of review and non-renewal of his contract came as a bit of a surprise to him, but said he is "doing fine," although he said he is still somewhat "confused disoriented Thursday's Library Board meeting." He said he will spend time finishing the book he is writing about how to run a public library and already has some new job prospects.

Grayling Township appoints two new trustees to fill vacancies until November election

After interviewing 12 candidates, a team of four interviewers selected Dale French and Lacey Stephan III to fill two vacancies on the Grayling Township Board of Trustees.

"We had excellent candidates to choose from," said Monica Ashton, Grayling Township Clerk and chair of the interview team. "It was a really difficult decision because they all gave great interviews and any one of them would have made a good trustee."

French, a retired Michigan National Guard officer, has served on the township's planning commission for many years and was instrumental in the development of the township master plan and, more recently, the new zoning ordinance.

Stephan, a lifelong township resident, owns a local construction company, but is new to township government service.

Ashton said Stephan's enthusiasm and French's prior township service made them the unanimous choices of the entire interviewing team. She said both are willing to stand for re-election in the general election November 2.

The two board openings were the result of resignations by former trustees Tom Hall and Cynthia Timmons. Hall's job requirements necessitated his resignation and Timmons cited a conflict of interest with her state-appointed position on the Crawford County Family Independence Agency Board.

Stephan and French were sworn in at a special meeting held January 7 at the Grayling Township Hall. In other board action, Douglas Slater was appointed to the Grayling Recreation Authority Board of Directors.

Lacey Stephan III, a local construction company owner and lifelong township resident, was sworn in as a new trustee by Grayling Township Clerk Monica Ashton (right) on January 7.

County must pay legal fees, court adds 2004 budget to suit

by Cheryll Ruley Staff Writer

Although assigned circuit court Judge Dennis C. Kolenda has rendered a decision in the combined cases concerning the funding dispute between the 46th Circuit Trial Court and two of its funding units, the case is nowhere near a conclusion.

The case originated when the Trial Court filed a lawsuit against Crawford County in early 2002 for failing to honor a contract agreement to fund a retirement and healthcare plan for court employees. Crawford, along with Kalkaska and Otsego counties, appropriates funds for the administration of the Unified Trial Court, established by the Michigan Supreme Court as a pilot program to decrease court costs and streamline its process-

In August 2001, the Crawford County Board of Commissioners passed a resolution it believed was an agreement to pay benefits in the 2001-2002 fiscal year, but asking that future funding of the benefits be revisited in 2002-2003. The Trial Court believed passage of that resolution, along with those passed by Kalkaska and Otsego counties, constituted a contractual agreement for future funding of retirement ben-

The dispute began when Crawford officials argued their resolution was not a contract agreement and that benefits proposed by the court would eventually create millions of dollars in unfunded liabilities to the county and its taxpayers. Court administrators disagreed with that theory. Kalkaska County Commissioners soon joined Crawford County in its battle with the court.

Otsego County, tasked with the bookkeeping for the court, went forward and paid the benefits and funding Crawford and Kalkaska counties did not pay in order to keep the court funded. Crawford and Kalkaska counties agreed Otsego overstepped its bounds by paying funds the two counties had not approved, causing Otsego County to become unwilling third-party defendants as well as counter-plaintiffs when it filed its own suit to recoup its losses from the two counties. By paying the funds, Crawford and Kalkaska claimed Otsego had exceeded its authority in authorizing the retiree healthcare fund and pension upgrade.

The case went to trial before Kolenda, a visiting judge from Crawford County. The trial lasted six days. Kolenda rendered his decision July 25, 2003 that the resolutions did indeed constitute a contract and found Crawford and Kalkaska counties failed to fund the Trial Court at a level reasonable for its operations. He ordered the two counties to pay their arrearages in court funding for 2001, 2002 and Kolenda stated that even if the counties have to cut all non-mandated services, such as 4-H, building and zoning, and road patrols, the Trial Court had to be funded to its satisfaction. Crawford County Commissioners have held their ground on the funding issue, that the court must tighten its belt like county departments have had to do as costs rise and revenues fall or flatten. Court administrators have argued that they have increased revenues to the county that more than cover any increase in the court's budgets.

Counties must abide by the rule of separate but equal powers as governmental units, Kolenda indicated in his ruling. Therefore, they cannot hold the court's budget to levels it believes will not cover the court's needed funding. But, even though the court and the county are considered separate but equal powers, Kolenda provided no direction to the court regarding the effect its budget may have when the county is facing shortfalls in revenue, nor its effect on the taxpayers. He did state, however, that upon review of court expenditures, he found them to be reasonable, including its recently requested funding of a 1.5 percent pay raise for court employees.

In his decision of January 7, Kolenda ordered the law firm of Cohl, Stoker, Toskey and McGlinchey, PC, representing Kalkaska Crawford and Counties, to pay Otsego County over $91,000 as a sanction for filing a lawsuit against Otsego County claiming it had exceeded its authority when it implemented the retiree healthcare fund and the pension upgrade. Kolenda ruled the suit was "unclear whether it relied upon the Michigan Uniform Budgeting and Accounting Act (UBAA) or simply cited it as one basis." If it had relied on the UBAA, then those alleged violations should have been reported to the attorney general and not brought to court. Kolenda said research should have been performed by Kent County, on July 1, 2003 in the law firm before filing this case, therefore he holds it accountable for the cost of Otsego's legal fees, and not Crawford and Kalkaska.

The judge denied, however, Otsego's request to be reimbursed for legal fees incurred while its legal counsel monitored the proceedings of Trial Court v. Crawford and Kalkaska Counties.

Kolenda also ordered Crawford, Kalkaska and its legal representatives together to pay. Otsego County over $31,000 as sanctions in a related case and relieved Otsego County of paying any of the Trial Court's legal fees because it was paying its share all along, regardless of the litigation. The judge ruled that the Trial Court had a right to legal representation at the expense of Crawford and Kalkaska, and ordered them to pay Otsego County over $110,000 in reimbursements for fees paid thus far.

Last, Kolenda is allowing the Trial Court to amend its complaint to add the dispute over its 2003-2004 budget, stating that "allowing a pending case to deal with any subsequent disputes is far more efficient... Hence, this Court will 'finally conclude' the funding dispute before it by adding and dealing with the 2004 budget."

He also wrote, "submitting the 2004 budget to the SCAO (Supreme Court Administrative Office) and mediation would be a fruitless endeavor. It is transparent from recent history that Crawford and Kalkaska Counties will not agree to anything which is not complete acquiescence in their position."

· Crawford and Kalkaska Counties have voiced their concern of losing their rights to appeal giving the length of time awaiting the final judgment from Kolenda due to his decision to allow the 2004 budget dispute to be added to the suit.

"They can, right now, file an application for leave to appeal... "Kolenda wrote. "Crawford and Kalkaska Counties' appellate rights will not be adversely materially affected by requiring the former (filing a leave to appeal), no matter how long entry of final judgment is delayed. Those counties could have filed an application last August, and their application would have been granted. Therefore, they are arguing that their own dawdling or tactical decision, whichever it was, should be considered prejudicial. That is unacceptable bootstrapping."

In addition to his regular Crawford County Controller Paul Compo will be helping the Commission on Aging (COA) over the next few months in its search for a new executive director, following the November 2003 resignation of former Director Nova Anderson. Compo will also assist the COA with general operating issues.

Compo and the COA agreed to a 120-day contract on January 12, with an option for renewal if more of his time is needed.""

Board members said they hope to finalize the job description at that meeting so they can begin the search for a new director.

An arrest warrant was issued on January 7. Bergan was served the warrant at the Thumb Correctional Facility where he is currently serving a sentence for stealing more than $100,000 from a local towing firm in 2001.

In that case, Bergan was apprehended in Ohio just days after the theft where he and a friend were involved in a motorcycle accident.

Police officials in the area took him into custody at the hospital where he was being treated after a routine check of his license revealed a warrant for his arrest had been issued the same day in Michigan.

Bergan was brought from prison to Crawford County where he was arraigned January 13 on the new open murder charge in District Court before Judge John G. Hunter.

A preliminary examination is scheduled for January 27, however Huss said he expects Bergan to waive his right to have the hearing within 14 days to allow his court-appointed attorney more time to prepare for the show cause hearing.

The law firm of Carey and Jaskowski PLLC has been assigned by Hunter to serve as Bergan's legal representative.

District deals with second bomb threat in a month

Haug said the mood in the gym was somber and the students were very well behaved during the assembly. Afterwards, students were dismissed to their classes.

"I am really proud of the middle school students," Haug said. "They were really thinking about what was being said. I really hope the message got through."

No one has been named a suspect in this latest incident. Haug said she hopes the culprit comes forward or is discovered soon, however, the business of education continues to go forward in the District.

Correction

In the December 18, 2003 issue of the Crawford County Avalanche a second error was discovered in the article regarding a proposed road ends ordinance in Grayling Township.

The article misstated, in its letter to the Grayling Township Board of Trustees, the township's insurance carrier "also recommended that the ordinance not be adopted."

The only statement of recommendation the insurance carrier made in its letters was: "If the Township should decide to address road ends and/or the limiting of activities at the road ends, the Township should contact their (sic) attorney for advice on how to best approach this concern."

The Avalanche regrets the error and any confusion this may have caused.

Officials point to pneumonia as cause of Mayhew deaths

by Cheryll Ruley Staff Writer

Health and law enforcement officials believe they have discovered the cause of two deaths earlier this month Roscommon County.

The Michigan State Police have ruled out any foul play in the deaths of Gerald Mayhew, age 64, and his daughter, Christina, age 35, of AuSable Township. Preliminary tests show the pair most likely died from complications due to bacterial pneumonia.

Both family members were reported to have been suffering from some other pre-existing health conditions which may have compromised their immune systems and their ability to fight off the disease.

Gerald's wife, Carol, has been treated for flu-like symptoms since being taken to Mercy Hospital in Grayling by ambulance on December 31. On January 2, two more ambulances were dispatched to the family's home, finding one person had passed away and another died later that day.

The home was placed under a quarantine by health officials while an investigating began into the cause of the deaths and to avoid any possible contamination of more people.

The state police and health officials continue to wait for the results of toxicology tests but said they believe there is enough evidence available at this time to prove bacterial pneumonia was the cause of the Mayhew deaths and that the situation never posed a danger to the communi-

Disease Control, nosocomial bacterial pneumonia has been difficult to diagnose.

Frequently, the criteria for diagnosis have been fever, cough, and development of sputum containing pus, along with x-ray evidence of the lung infection.

Many people who come down with this type of pneumonia have been respiratory ventilator patients or those who have recently undergone abdominal surgery. Bacterial pneumonia may become a post-operative issue and must be treated aggressively.

This type of pneumonia has been associated with high fatality rates. People receiving mechanically assisted ventilation have higher mortality rates than people who are not. However, other factors, such as a person's underlying disease(s) - such as chronic lung disease - and organ failure, are stronger predictors of death in those with pneumo-

Personal style of journalism fading

R. BRANSDORFER since 1976 has been owner, publisher, editor, photographer, delivery person, often janitor and shoveler of snow from sidewalks for The Clare Sentinel, a small weekly newspaper in the center of the Michigan mitten.

Al Bransdorfer was my friend. When he died from complications of an aortal aneurysm last week it ended our association, personal and professional, which spanned more than 50 years.

We became friends when we worked together 53 years ago as beginning reporters at The Holland Evening Sentinel shortly after graduation from Michigan State University in 1950.

Al loved the police beat. He was good at it, too. He seemed happiest tailing a crime. He loved taking pictures, and always carried his camera, on assignment or off, and produced many outstanding news photos throughout his career.

Later we worked together at The Mt. Pleasant Times News (now The Morning Sun), and starting in 1968 as partners in Northern Communications, Inc., which owned small weekly newspapers in Reed City, Lake City and Clare, with Al as publisher of all three.

When our little company decided to liquidate, Al and Mary Bransdorfer bought out their partners and became sole owners of The Clare Sentinel in 1976. It was a working partnership, too; Mary sold ads, kept the books, ran the office, and usually kept Al in focus.

They found a permanent hometown in Clare, and never moved away.

THE OWNER OF a small town newspaper has a unique challenge. There's no one else around town he can talk to about newspaper problems. He's the only newspaper guy around.

No one else in town quite understands the problems the newspaper guy faces. Only another newspaper man will fill that bill.

Over the years, Al and I probably talked every week or so. When we had business questions or publishing ideas or thoughts about MSU sports or what was going on in journalism education or the newspaper business, we turned to each other for solace or advice.

Al Bransdorfer was one of a vanishing breed of newspaper people.

In Clare -- as in the other small towns in which he worked at newspapers -- he always embraced the community. He became involved in all sorts of civic activities. He gave his community his own brand of personal leadership.

Al practiced a personal type of journalism. Even into his mid-70s, as owner of the paper he still was personally covering city hall and the police departments and events in his community.

There aren't many in this mold operating in small-town newspapers today -- a hard working guy who owns his own newspaper in his own hometown, does most of the work himself, and is dedicated to the long range welfare of his com-

Of the 300 or so weekly newspapers in ·Michigan today, I can think of maybe a couple dozen or so who push hard in personal journalism as Al Bransdorfer has done.

It's not like it used to be. That once was the norm.

THE JOURNALISM WORLD today, big and small, is pitched on clustering of several newspapers under a single corporate owner -- sort of what Al and I had in mind when we formed that little company almost 40 years ago.

Group ownership makes perfect business sense. Business advantages are huge when a newspaper company can dominate a market, eliminate duplicate services and expenses, share personnel and resources among several publications, pool assets.

A single newspaper becomes a profit center rather than a community institution. But in my opinion, the best kind of newspapering is the kind Al Bransdorfer practiced most of his life -- roll up your sleeves, do the work yourself, live or die by the fruit of your own efforts, be dedicated to your own hometown.

It often doesn't pay too well, but it can be very satisfying. There's not much of that going on anymore. It's a dying art.

Home town newspapering like Al Bransdorfer practiced all his life may soon be lost forever.

Owning a pet comes with responsibilities

To the editor,

present:

I was pleased to read, in the January 8 edition of the Avalanche, that the Animal Shelter of Crawford County is offering a spay/neuter program for cats. I hope the cat owners of Crawford County will respond to this offer and help keep the population of cats without homes down in this county.

Anyone who owns a pet has a responsibility to care for that pet and make sure it has proper attention. The statement from Dixie that "many more would like to do the responsible thing, by Dixie Lobsinger, Vice President, Animal Shelter of Crawford County, Inc.

VIEWPOINT

Shelter's return rate for dogs hits 98%, cats only 42%

The year 2003 has come and gone, and it's time to let everyone know how the Animal Shelter take our pets to the Detroit Zoo twice a year for a weekend; many animals who would be euthanized here now find new homes.

Last year we purchased a truck to help haul our animals as transportation has always created a problem. Having the new truck also allowed us to participate in two additional adoption events in northern Michigan in 2003.

Our "cat house" was finally completely. We now have an actual office and the cats have wonderful, spacious cages, thanks to Grayling Township who donated the majority of the money to purchase them

We took in 349 dogs and puppies last year. All animals are now spayed or neutered before they leave the shelter. Each dog is heartworm tested, spayed or neutered and has all of its vaccinations before it is put up for adoption.

Heartworm testing is new at the shelter. I have never felt it posed a great threat up here, but downstate it is quite prevalent. It is very costly to treat. The majority of the dogs at the zoo are tested, so we began testing also. To my surprise, five dogs that came to us in 2003 tested positive.

Dr. Paul Mesack, DVM, and I agree that this is a pretty high number. I would urge all of you to start having your pets tested for heartworm each year as the infection seems to be on the rise help with this problem, a grant We adopted, or returned to their owners, 310 dogs. Only 22 Most of you are aware that we dogs were euthanized, most of them were sick, injured or just too old for us to find them new homes. That's a 93-percent return rate, better than any "nokill" shelter I know of.

Cats, on the other hand, did not do well last year. We took in 313 cats and kittens and only managed to place or return 117 of them. That means that 58-percent of the cats were euthanized. I am not proud of these numbers.

It seems we have convinced the vast majority of you to spay or neuter your dogs, we see very few litters of puppies. However, you still fail to spay or neuter your cats and we find ourselves overrun with unwanted cats and litters of kittens.

You dump them at our front gates, in the woods and alongside the road. I see you sitting outside the grocery store trying to give them away. I hear stories you tell about not being able to take them home, so you are going to dump them somewhere or drown them.

These animals did not choose to live with you, you made that choice and now you are responsible for them. A simple surgery can stop the whole, terrible mess. In October alone, I euthanized 52 cats and kittens. It sickens me to think of such numbers and it should sicken you, especially if you were one of the people who added to the problem.

While trying to find a way to opportunity from WalMart arose. The grant was supposed to help with shelter adoptions and was for up to $5,000. There was a variety of ways the shelter could have used this money for the purpose WalMart intended, but we decided to apply and use the money, not to improve shelter adoptions, but to help you spay and neuter your cats.

Since we asked for the money for a purpose other than what WalMart intended, we weren't sure we would get anything. WalMart sent us a check for $1,000 from their Very Best Pet Network fund.

If you have cats that need to be spayed or neutered, call me. If you know someone who constantly has kittens or someone you've seen in front of the store giving kittens away, call me. If you have wild cats you enjoy feeding, but need to keep your colony from getting larger, call me. My number is 348-4117 (shelter) or 348-9178 (home.)

We could have just used this money to spay or neuter cats at the shelter, but we chose to help you. If you don't call, we can't

I don't want the cats in this community to have another year like this one. Only you can change the numbers. Euthanasia should never be considered an acceptable form of population control. History shows that it just doesn't work anyways.

We must help each other using hope

To the editor,

We have gone from a society that believed in hard work to survive and the hope that our lives could be better than our parents' lives, to a society that believes in wish fulfillment.

There is no work, no respect, no ownership in wishes.

If one is granted, we enjoy it briefly before going on to our next wish. If we see no chance for our wishes being fulfilled, we do not redouble our efforts and work harder, we simply turn to the most convenient means of escape, be it entertainment,

If one escape starts to falter and we might have to face our unfulfilled wishes, we look for better, stronger escapes. With either our wishes or our escapes, we will never be satisfied.

We need hope, hard work, and a caring, supportive group to be part of - be it family, co-workers, friends, or neighbors - to find a way out of this destructive

I challenge all the governments and public services of Crawford County to hope, work hard, and develop or encourage the creation of caring, supportive groups for the diverse and amazing people who call Crawford County home.

OMH to host Red Cross blood drive

Many accidents occur in Michigan's winter months due to icy road conditions. Blood will be in high demand because of the number of life-threatening accidents that occur during this time. Armbruster was reported missing by family members in October 2003 and was last seen at the Pinehurst Bar in the Indian River area. His family became concerned when he did not arrive for planned a visit with his younger children, two sons ages three and eight years.

Results of an autopsy received on January 7 states Armbruster died of a heart attack on or about October 10. Armbruster's daughter, Lisa Masella, age 21 of Grayling,

Global Religious War

We have been warning you for many years that our war against global terrorism is a religious war. Finally, a politician that we may disagree with in some other areas has made a similar statement. Senator Joe Lieberman publicly warned Americans on Fox News in November 2003 about the danger of a Global Religious War. The Associated Press carried the story on November 30, 2003.

Lieberman said on Fox News, "This is a battle to stop al-Qaida, Saddam Hussein and every other enemy of freedom and modernity from turning the beginning of the 21st century into what is truly unbelievable, which would be a global religious war." When Senator Lieberman was asked whether this religious war would be, "Islam versus Christianity and Judaism combined," Lieberman said, "Islam against -- fanatical Islam against Christianity, Judaism, Hinduism, every other "ism," every other religion, including every part of Islam that doesn't agree with these fanatics."

Lieberman went on to say, "Iraq is the testing ground, and that's why we've got to make sure that victory is assured." Lieberman said, "This is a classic case: if you try to ride the back of this tiger, you're going to get swallowed," he said. Now, "I believe they're getting it, because they've been attacked now, two or three times this year, in a devastating way."

Well, we know Saddam Hussein has since been captured, but he is just one of many international terrorists working to promote global terrorism. Yet, even conservative politicians seem hesitant to publicly admit that radical religion is the root cause our global war. They insist on calling Islam a religion of peace.

Radical Islam may eventually be replaced by an even more dangerous world religion. Liberals hate all authoritarian religions. Their goal is for a global consensus in religion which consolidates all the world religions into one humanistic faith. They will use Radical Islam as their excuse to silence all exclusive claims to religious authority. The Koran of Islam will be used to illustrate why the Torah of the Jews, and the New Testament of the Christians must be silenced also. So their goal is to replace all Bibles with their own humanistic world version in the name of world peace.

Americans are being programmed to accept this gradual change. All public mention of Jesus Christ and Christian morality is being silenced while minority religions are being defended. One can discredit and mock Jesus Christ in America, but attempts to discredit Allah or Mohammed are being silenced. For example, a federal judge has ruled that a California school district didn't violate the Constitution when it taught seventh-graders about of trees near the river to provide shade and the construction of mechanisms for fish to move upstream over the "dams" on the Hatchery property.

Brad Jensen of Huron Pines RC&D (Roscommon-Crawford Conservation District) was given an award for his work on the stormwater diversion project.

The project is designed to prevent stormwater from running directly into the AuSable River.

Mike Jillings and Jeff Keller of the Kalkaska Conservation District were given awards for their work on the restoration of the Upper Manistee River.

Beaver Creek Township reduces zoning violations to civil infractions

by Susan Warrington Staff Writer

The Beaver Creek Township Board of Trustees has accepted the recommendations of its Planning Commission and adopted Zoning Ordinance #26, changing zoning violations from misdemeanors to civil infractions. This action was taken at the Board's January 12 regular meeting.

The Board also adopted ordinance #27, establishing a violations bureau. This allows the township to direct violations to a clerk within the township for collection of fines and costs. Should a person decide not to pay the clerk, the matter would be referred to the zoning administrator who would then follow up with the problem in court.

Ed Holtcamp, who is chairman of the township Planning Commission, and some board members stressed the point of the ordinance is to resolve a violation, not to penalize people and "suck $75 (the cost of the first fine for a violation) out of them."

Many board members said they have noticed a definite improvement in appearance of the township since the zoning laws have gone into effect.

The planning commission will review the Beaver Creek Township master plan this summer. After that work is complete, there may be some. changes in zoning. However, Holtcamp said he didn't expect there to be many changes.

Post 106 - Grayling

The Akyem-Abuakwa region in Ghana found funds to build a library, but had no money to place any new books upon the shelves. The Giving the Gift of Reading - Ghana project should help fill those shelves with more than just worn paperbacks. Children use the library for studying, but would love a selection of age appropriate books to help them increase the literacy rate in their country.

Work in Ghana comes home

Grayling resident Tasha Carlisle recently spent a year in Africa working with its children and learning the culture. A sad part of that culture is the lack of literacy among the children of Ghana due to a lack of books. Carlisle is now asking the people of Crawford County to help her change that situation.

Carlisle will share her experiences of Africa at the Devereaux Memorial Crawford County Library on Tuesday, February 10 at 7 p.m. when the Friends of Crawford County Library hosts an after-hours kickoff to gather books for Ghana. The reading of a traditional African children's story will be included in the event.

The Crawford County Library system is dedicated to giving the gift of reading both here and abroad. Because of that, everyone is asked to bring a gift of one or more new or used books (in good condition) to the event, or to the library in Grayling, February 10-14. The books will be sent overseas to the underprivileged in Ghana, Africa.

The project, named "Giving the Gift of Reading - Ghana," was inspired by Carlisle, a 2000 graduate of Grayling High School and the daughter of Nancy Hunt and Daniel Carlisle.

"The struggles of the children of Ghana are devastating. It is amazing what we take for granted," said Bambi Mansfield-Sanderson in response to Carlisle's request to help gather books for the region. Mansfield-Sanderson is the Youth Services Librarian for the library system.

"The people of Ghana need all types of literary works, but the area of greatest need is children's books."

The books will be shipped to Ghana through a nonprofit organization out of Cambridge, Massachusetts. The Friends of the Library will assist in the gathering of books as well as adding to the collection themselves.

District Chief Executive James Kwabena Bomfeh of Kintempo, Ghana (left) was the inspiration for Grayling resident, Tasha Carlisle's (right) drive to bring the gift of reading from the U.S. to his town in Africa. A local child joins them for the photo.

"Tasha raised the funds for shipping, so all we need to do is provide the books which we in America have in such great supply," said Director Edward Elsner.

Also, Carlisle has lent the Devereaux Memorial Library items she gathered while in Ghana which are now on display for public viewing.

"I am so happy that the library is helping me. The children of Ghana thirst for knowledge, but have no way of quenching their thirst," said Carlisle. She said she has learned to appreciate what an education truly means, and is giving of herself to help others. To the children of Ghana, she is their very own ambassador of hope.

"It is an honor to be involved and support literacy development throughout the world. It is a greater honor to be supporting a local young woman who has such great passion to aid others in furthering their lives," Elsner said of Carlisle.

After completion of high school, Carlisle went on to pursue a Bachelors degree in Mathematics through Grand Valley State University. Wanting to broaden her own life experiences and education, Carlisle requested to attend the University of Cape Coast in Cape Coast, Africa.

While there, Carlisle found it difficult to understand how the children of the area were able to survive with such limited educational and financial resources.

"Tasha has always been a woman of determination. Whatever goal she sets her mind to she achieves. I am excited to be working with her in her ambition and passion about literacy. Literacy is one of the greatest ways that an individual is able to achieve total freedom," said Mansfield-Sanderson.

Carlisle spent many hours in the company of the people and wildlife of Africa. Impressed by one such individual, she began her quest.

She learned for every five children in Ghana, there is one book, many of which are from the turn of the century when Europeans came over in the 1800s. The Akyem-Abuakwa region in Ghana found funds to build a library, but had no money to place any books upon the shelves. Her new friend, District Chief Executive James Kwabena Bomfeh of Kintempo, Ghana is now anxiously awaiting Crawford County's gift of books.

Start gathering a gift of books, or donate just one book to the Giving the Gift of Reading - Ghana and visit the Devereaux Memorial Crawford County Library, 201 Plum St. in Grayling, next to AuSable Primary School and down the street from Mercy Hospital. Hours are 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. Monday through Priday and 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Saturday.

New conservation officers take to the woods

by Aileo Weinmann Capital News Service.

LANSING - Palling through thin ice, dissecting large animals and navigating a way out of the woods. These trials weren't designed for reality TV - it's standard training for the 17 new conservation officers who recently joined the Department of Natural Resources.

Becoming a DNR conservation officer is extremely competitive and requires 10 months of training. The recent graduates spent a lot of that time at the State Police Academy in Lansing.

Conservation officers - or COs – as one of the new class, Rich Stowe called them, do things such as chase down illegal off-road vehicles or snowmobiles on a trail, pick up fallen eagles, track elk poachers or settle tribal fishing disputes.

Stowe, a Leelanau County native, works in Presque Isle County.

"Our DNR conservation officers benefit from some of the most comprehensive training of any law enforcement operation in the country," said K.L. Cool, who is the DNR director. Out of 1,900 applicants, 20 were invited to attend the academy, of whom 17 finished. There are now 146 COs working in all 83 counties.

The training is intense. Days often stretch 12 hours or longer, beginning with physical conditioning. Officers must learn rules about hunting, fishing and public lands, in addition to criminal and traffic laws.

All recruits know what it feels like to fall into a frozen the job.

middle of the winter, drill holes in the ice and cause them to go through," said Sgt. Jane Gordon, who runs the training program. It's a safe, controlled environment, Gordon insisted -recruits wear insulated dry suits, with the U.S. Coast Guard standing watch. "We do it so we know how to react and get back out onto the ice," she said. "I would guess that 60 to 70 percent of our officers have gone through the ice at some point in their career."

Without a dry suit, recruits sit in an ice bath - with paramedics monitoring vital signs to understand how hypothermia affects their bodies.

Christopher Holmes, a new CO working in Washtenaw County, said the training was a lot harder than he expected, even compared to his previous experience as a firefighter in the Army.

While the dry suit kept him warm during the ice rescue, Holmes said the hypothermia ice bath was a different story:

"I could barely breathe. They trained us to focus on breathing and how to get your mindset on making it out - it was pretty. interesting to find out what your body can take."

COs also learn animal autopsy techniques so they can identify poaching wounds - for example, how to tell if someone tries to use an arrow to disguise an illegal fatal gunshot wound.

Holmes earned a bachelor's degree in wildlife biology from Western Michigan University before his DNR training.

"It was a lot harder than even lake before their first day on college," he said. "When you're in the academy, you're constantly stressing."

Doctoring under influence could be illegal soon

by Aileo Weinmann Capital News Service

LANSING -- Going to the dentist can be expensive, even painful, but it shouldn't be deadly.

A dental visit cost 21-year-old Michele Rose Sak her life, according to her brother, Rep. Michael Sak (D-Grand Rapids).

The dentist overdosed her, he said. "The amount of valium and nitrous oxide was so much that it stopped her heart."

Sak said his sister died because booze or drugs clouded the dentist's judgment. Although his family settled a civil case, no criminal charges could be filed.

"We worked with the prosecutor, but there was no hard evidence that could prove he was intoxicated," he said.

The dentist was able to continue with his practice for months while the state investigated.

The House has voted to change that, passing two bills Sak cosponsored and that he believes could have saved his sister. If they become law, they would make it a misdemeanor -- carrying maximum penalties of $1,000 and 90 days in jail -- for any dentist, doctor, nurse or other program,

licensed health care professional to be drunk or high while treating patients.

That would apply to about 375,000 Michigan health care professionals.

It's already illegal to prescribe a drug, medication or poison while intoxicated. The change would expand the law to prohibit engaging in health care practice with a bodily alcohol content of 0.05 percent, lower than the 0.08 percent for drunken driving, or being under the influence of a controlled substance.

Convicted violators would have to enter the Health Professional Recovery Program, a treatment plan. Since 1993, the program has existed to both protect the public and monitor treatment recovery for health professionals.

Participants can check themselves in, which helps them hold onto their license, but the program is required to report them to the state if they fail to meet requirements.

Rick Frankhart, the program director, said about 700 participants went through the program in the past year, with a 70 to 80 percent success rate. Depending on the case, many people in the program continue to practice, as long as they don't pose a threat to patients.

"I'm not sure this legislation addresses the core issue," which Frankhart said is effectively treating people with a disease.

But Gordon McNeill, the Barry County prosecutor, disagrees. McNeill was frustrated recently when forced to charge Dr. Christopher Tomczyk, a Hastings dentist who was treating patients while drunk, with assault and battery, because no other appropriate law is on the books. Tomczyk was convicted.

"He was completely schnockered," McNeil said.

Police found an empty bottle of tequila in the office trash when they checked a patient complaint. Tomczyk had already fled his office, but had a bodily alcohol content of 0.25 percent, more than thrice the legal limit for drunk driving, when he was caught later.

"I felt as if I was in a twilight zone with a mad scientist," said Gloria Anderson, the patient who complained that Tomczyk hugged her inappropriately in the course of replacing a filling.

Since then, Tomczyk has entered the Health Professionals Recovery Program and is still practicing dentistry. He did not return calls requesting comment.

The Michigan State Medical Society, Dental Association and Health & Hospital Association support the measures. Gov. Jennifer Granholm doesn't oppose them, according to Liz Boyd, her press secretary.

The legislation is now awaiting action in the Senate Health Policy Committee.

IRS offers many publications to help you along

From aardvark to zyzzyva, the IRS has a publication that covers it - free for the asking. The IRS has numerous publications on a variety of tax-related topics available by phone, fax, or the Internet at www.irs.gov.

Are you a student seeking knowledge on the lifetime learning credit? Check out Publication 970. Are you a first-time home buyer? Information on potential deductions is housed in Publication 530.

No matter what you're looking for, you can find it by using one of these easy steps:

• Access the IRS web site's "Forms and Publications" page to find what you need. Forms and publications are listed by number and then title. And there's a search feature you can use if you know the topic but not the number of the form or publication.

• Read Publication 910, "Guide to Free Tax Services," to identify the many IRS tax materials and services available to you, and how, when and where to get them. Internet, telephone and fax access to tax materials, filing options, tax publications, tax education and assistance programs, and tax tips are all covered in this guide.

• If you know the name or number of the form or publication you need, call the toll-free Forms and Publications telephone line at 1-800-TAX-FORM (1-800-829-3676) to place your order.

• Dial 703-368-9694 (not a toll-free call) from a fax machine to get a faxed index of frequently requested tax forms. Follow the voice prompts and key in your response. You may order up to three items in a single call. Your order will be faxed back to you through your

If you still can't find the information you need, call the IRS toll-free customer service line at 1-800-829-1040.

Oh, and if you plunged into the aardvark breeding business just before the bottom dropped out, or if zyzzyva weevils munched your tropical plant business into oblivion, you can read up on bankruptcy in Publication 908.

Facing a lot of different tax questions this year? IRS experts have pulled together an overview of common tax issues in one convenient place -Publication 17, "Your Federal Income Tax." This updated publication, available on the IRS Web site, www.irs.gov, contains a vast array of helpful information in one guide.

From stock sales to student loans, this 300-page publication holds the answers to many of your questions, such as:

 Need help deciphering the mysteries of the Roth IRA? Try Chapter 18 for retirement accounts.

. Do you have a new child in the house? See Chapter 36 for the Child Tax Credit.

· Are you selling stock for the first time? Check Chapter 17 for capital gains. If you're unloading losers, capital losses are there, too.

• Do you need to report the profit on your home sale? See Chapter 16 for some good news. Generally, you only need to report the sale of your home if your gain is more than $250,000 ($500,000 if married filing a joint return).

And the best part about Publication 17? It's free,

Troops, sailors get the star treatment

Local soldier, PFC Justin Michal, and his fellow troops were treated to a surprise visit last month by Late Night talk show host David Letterman.

Letterman provided entertainment and some much-needed laughs as well as encouraging words for our men and women in uniform.

Michal is currently performing inside security duties with the U.S. Army at the Baghdad International Airport in Iraq, following months of work with Special Ops Forces, hunting down Saddam Hussein and his many operatives.

Michal is the son of JoAnn and Neal Michal of Grayling, and a 2001 graduate of Grayling High School.

For Navy Fireman William J. Hartig, also of Grayling, he and his fellow sailors aboard the USS Enterprise currently in the Arabian Gulf, were recently treated to a visit by actor Ben Affleck.

Affleck delivered a moraleboosting message to the 5,300 Sailors and Marines on board as they prepared to spend the holi-

PINIONS

The opinions expressed in the letters and columns on this page are solely those of the writer, and do not necessarily reflect the views and opinions of The Crawford County Avalanche.

Pastor's column would give Iraqis wrong impression

To the editor,

I have a word for members of our armed forces who are proudly serving their country in Iraq. I know you are trying to establish peace in the region, and to promote peace you are trying to improve relations between yourselves and ordinary Iraqis. I also know a number of you are receiving the Avalanche.

Now, I know ordinary Iraqis are unlikely to get hold of your back copies of the Avalanche, but you can never tell, there are spies everywhere. You can't be too careful.

Because if ordinary Iraqis were to read Pastor B's column, it could undo months of patient bridge building between Muslims and Americans. It would make Iragis believe Americans really are conducting a religious war (something fundamentalist extremists tell them, but which most Iraqis - so far - believe) and Americans are happy to believe Christian fundamentalists who tell blatant lies about Islam.

Yes, unfortunately Lies? Pastor B has been fed a fairy tale by "author Rick Mathes" who paints Islam as the Evil Entity of the East. In turn, Pastor B wants us to swallow it.

In the first place, we're supposed to believe nearly all Muslim clerics tell their followers to kill Christians. Horse feathers. The minority of Muslim leaders who are whipping up anti-American sentiment are against our foreign policy, which if you hadn't noticed is a political matter, not an article of religious faith. (Thank God!)

The Qur'an even praises those who take up arms with the help of Allah to defend "the monasteries and churches, the synagogues and mosques in which His praise is daily celebrated." (Sura 22:40)

In the second place, we're supposed to believe that a Muslim Imam doesn't even know the definition of "unbelievers" in the Qur'an. Unbelievers referred to the idol-worshipping pagan Arabs who persecuted the Prophet Mohammad for trying to introduce monotheism into Arabia.

Christians and Jews are known to Muslims as "Peoples of the Book." Of them, the Qur'an says, "There are among the People of the Book some upright men who... enjoin justice and forbid evil and vie with each other in good works. These are righteous men: whatever good they do, its reward shall not be denied them. Allah knows the righteous." (Sura 3)

In the third place, we're supposed to believe that a supposed Muslim fundamentalist was "speechless" and "hung his head in shame" at the Christian's argument, I'll believe that one when Pastor B hangs his head in shame upon reading this.

Why should a Man of God so much enjoy repeating lies about another religion? I'm puzzled.

Does he think he's going to convert Osama bin Laden by lying about Islam? I'd be delighted if Osama gave up the error of his ways, but somehow I have doubts that Pastor B's column is the silver bullet which will achieve that.

So, back to our brave men and women in Iraq: For your own safety and to prevent Iraqis from getting the wrong impression of us, I'd advise you to cut Pastor B's column out of your treasured copy of the Avalanche.

WASHINGTON NOTES

by U.S. Senator Carl Levin (D-MI)

2003: A year in review

As we begin a new year, I wanted to share with you some of the legislative accomplishments and disappointments of 2003, and look ahead to the challenges of 2004.

With over 8.5 million Americans now out of work, I am very disappointed that Congress adjourned without extending unemployment benefits for those who have lost their jobs because of the economic downturn.

The Senate leadership prevented a vote on legislation I introduced to re-authorize an additional 13 weeks of federal unemployment assistance and allow more states to qualify as high unemployment states and receive additional federal assistance, but I will continue this fight in 2004.

By narrow majorities, Congress passed another tax cut in 2003 targeted largely to the wealthiest Americans which will dangerously deepen the federal deficit and weaken economic prospects for future generations. In just three years, we have fallen from a projected ten-year surplus of $5.6 trillion to a deficit of $374 billion – the largest ever.

The Congressional Budget Office (CBO) has projected a $480 billion deficit for the year ahead which, given the costs of the war in Iraq, is likely to surpass a half-trillion dollars. We are stacking up bills for our children and grandchildren to pay for our lack of fiscal discipline.

Under the guise of adding a prescription drug benefit, Congress passed a radical and illadvised restructuring of the Medicare program. I strongly support adding a prescription drug benefit to Medicare, but this new law will force many seniors to choose between staying in Medicare and leaving Medicare to join an HMO they otherwise would not join in order to get a prescription drug benefit. An estimated 25 percent of retirees with drug coverage through a former employer will lose that coverage under the new law.

While those are some of the disappointments of the year, we had positive accomplishments as I led a year-long examination of the U.S. tax shelter industry which looked at how accounting firms, banks, investment advisors, and lawyers have become high-powered engines behind the design and sale of abusive, and often illegal, tax shelters. found that these tax evasion schemes are generating millions of dollars in fees while robbing the U.S. Treasury of billions of dollars each year. We are working to craft legislation to address these abuses.

We must continue efforts to keep our citizens safe and strengthen Michigan's role in the war on terrorism.

Michigan fire departments received millions of dollars through the Department of Homeland Security (DHS) for training and equipment.

We have assisted Michigan businesses and universities in their efforts to develop technologies to keep our water supply safe, combat anthrax and protect our borders.

I have worked to ensure that the Michigan National Guard has modern facilities for training soldiers and performing its duties, and I have supported efforts to locate DHS facilities at Selfridge (ANG Base), and at Camp Grayling and the Alpena Combat Readiness Training Center.

To address the dumping of Canadian trash into Michigan landfills, the Governmental Affairs Committee approved legislation to stop the importation of Canadian waste until the Secretary of Homeland Security certifies that the methods and technology used to screen the waste for chemical, nuclear, biological and radiological weapons are as effective as those used to screen for such materials in other commercial vehicles entering the country.

For many years, I have fought the inequitable system whichforces "donor" states like Michigan to send more federal gasoline tax dollars to Washington than they receive back for road and bridge projects: In 2003, I introduced legislation to increase states' minimum guaranteed highway funding from 90.5% to 95% of a state's share of gas tax contributions, and I will continue to work with the Michigan Congressional Delegation and the Governor to increase our share of federal transportation dollars.

The Great Lakes and Michigan's environment remain top priorities. We were able to secure funds for the Army Corps of Engineers to help clean up the most polluted sites in the Great Lakes, and we secured funding to help repair damage from the floods in the U.P. the past two years. We also assisted Governor Granholm in obtaining $14 million from the Department of Agriculture for emerald ash borer eradication.

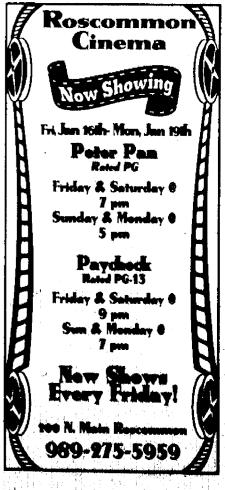

To assist Michigan industries, I also introduced legislation to improve the transportation system for international and interstate commerce, including decreasing border crossing times and improving highway corridors used for trade.

There is a lot of work to do in Congress in 2004, but I am looking forward to the challenges that lie ahead.

Carl Levin is the senior U.S. senator from Michigan.

Triathlon set for February 21

Event seeks competitors

10th annual event to include Nordic skiing, canoeing, and snowshoeing

The Johnson Outdoors Winter Wolf Challenge (WWC), Grayling's 10th annual winter triathlon, invites all athletes to compete in its expanded, more challenging 2004 event.

The 2004 WWC will be held on Saturday, February 21, starting at 9 a.m.

The decade old event is comprised of three segments (canoeing, snowshoeing, and cross country skiing), all of which are being lengthened and made more challenging this year.

"Each year the abilities of the competitors increase. So does the challenge that the Winter Wolf makes to them," event organizers said.

The first event, the boating challenge, has been lengthened so the competitors can enjoy the cold (and sometimes partially frozen) AuSable River for a distance of approximately eight miles. This segment will take paddlers about 1-2 hours.

The second event is the 5K snowshoe run, which will be conducted on mountain bike trails over the rolling hills at Hanson Hills Recreation Area.

The final event is the 12K Nordic (cross country) ski por-

Those who are interested in experiencing what a winter triathlon is all about but are not serious competitors can sign up for the fun run, which offers all three events at shorter distances.

The WWC is open to both men and women. Steve and Chris Seager of Grayling, for example, have competed in the Winter Wolf triathlon in every year of the event's nine-year existence.

The WWC has had athletes from several states enter, and has grown from short segments to a

FALLEN ARCHES

Fallen arches, or flatfoot, is marked by a collapse of the arch and flattening of the foot. Inflammation of the arch-supporting tendon may trigger fallen arches, as the tendon gradually lengthens and stretches. Acquired flatfoot commonly occurs from overuse over time. Those most at risk for this condition are older men and women who have spent years in jobs that require many hours of standing or walking. If left untreated, acquired flatfoot can cause severe pain and degenerative arthritis. fendonitis is typically the first symptom. If the condition progresses, corrective surgery may become necessary. In the early stages, anti-inflammatory medication and arch supports are recommended. Treatment is geared toward stopping progression so arthritis is delayed or prevented. No one should ignore foot pain. Professional attention is the best assurance of appropriate treatment, speedy recovery, and prevention of future consequences. Whether you are suffering from fallen arches or any other foot condition, here at GRAND TRAVERSE FOOT & ANKLE CENTER, P.C., we want you back into your normal routine as comfortably and as quickly as possible.
